The wonderful little town of Broadview has a handful of interesting places, some being historical and some being important places to the residents of Broadview. The one area that Broadview is noticed for would be the Broadview railway station. It was constructed by Canadian Pacific Railway in 1913. It would later on be considered a historical railway station in 1992. Another interesting spot that may catch tourists' eyes would be the museum, given the title "one of the largest small-town museums". It holds a plethora of different artifacts worth batting an eye towards, such as Sergeant Bill, Saskatchewan's most famous goat. It also has different types of houses throughout the century, based on the first nations that lived on the land long ago. This was first opened on July 15th. 1972. The school of Broadview has been and still is a vital part of the community, having a great amount of very helpful and voluntary students. It's also a very welcoming place to those coming from or outside of Broadview, which encourages the residents to enroll their children into the school.
