Interpretation:

As a multiethnic state, immigration is a major factor in Canada's population growth and growing economy. I researched data on the number of immigrants that have entered BC from 2010 to 2019. The number is fairly consistent with some years being higher such as 2015 and 2019 while other years relatively lower. In general, however, immigration is relatively consistent with around 35000 immigrants every year to BC. For the graph, the horizontal axis represents the year and the vertical axis represents the number of immigrants. I could not find data regarding 2021 but it should be interesting because I believe that COVID has played a major role in reducing immigration across the board.
